NOT YOUR ORDINARY OFFICE

Nestled in the peaceful, scenic surroundings of Hartley Farm in Winsley, our idyllic location offers more than just beautiful views, it delivers real productivity advantages.

We could tell you all the studies that show rural workplaces benefit from fewer distractions, lower commute stress and improved employee wellbeing which all drive greater focus and efficiency but you already know that ... right?

Instead, what we love about the location of lifework is the excellent connectivity to the region's business hubs whilst nestled in your own little peace of calm. Away from long commutes into over crowded cities, the team, guests and yourself can relax in the knowledge once the commute is done you have everything you need on site to make the day count. With access to restaurant, farm shop and nestled in the heart of Wiltshire (think ample lunch time walks) you really do get the "best of both worlds" without having to leave your space.

This is such a lovely place to work and to focus - nestled in the fields and the beautiful countryside with a warm welcome and all the amenities, good coffee and decent wi-fi you'd expect in town.

The countryside setting is calming and tranquil and I love that I can walk my dog to work, have her with me at the office and then walk her home
through the fields.

LIFE-WORK BALANCE

This is about choosing to be more present, rooted in the place you live and connected to the people around you - bringing work, opportunity, and creativity closer to home; where community can grow naturally.

Having the flexibility to show up for friends and family whilst sharing moments and local collaborations; our community creates opportunities you might never have thought of.

Many of our members have worked with national and global brands and their expertise is available over a coffee or desk share. Lifework is a place where world class talent is rooted in the village, making it easier than ever to build meaningful partnerships that only strengthen and celebrate your business.

It's also about being held by nature and letting the landscape support both your well being and work. Here, the outdoors becomes part of your daily rhythm, just a door opening away. A walk through nearby fields offers a chance to lift your gaze from the screen, reset, and return with a clearer mind.

All of these choices create a shift and embed a Scandinavian-inspired sense of localness, neighbourhood community and simplicity. We aim to create a space where work supports life rather than competes with it.

A NOTE FROM THE OFFICE

Having my own private office has been a real game changer. I loved being able to furnish the space in a way that suited how I like to work and also the ability to leave everything securely overnight meaning I could cycle into work without worrying about carrying everything back and forth which made for a much more relaxed and convenient start to the day.

What really stood out though, was the balance between privacy and community. I could shut the door and focus on meetings or deep work when I needed to, but I still felt part of the wider lifework community. Whether it was grabbing a coffee in the shared kitchen or joining one of their monthly community lunches with guest speakers, there were always opportunities to connect and pick up insights that genuinely helped me move my business forward.

Another unexpected perk was the free guest pass each month. It came in really handy, especially for friends or clients dropping by who suddenly needed a quiet space for a last minute call on a Friday afternoon!

Overall, having a private office here gave me the perfect mix of independence, flexibility, and community; something I didn't realise I'd been missing until I found it.
